

Editors' Picks

The best new stuff for sportsmen

NO SCREWUP

I joke about it, but you can really do some damage by using a screwdriver with too much or too little muscle. Enter the Wheeler Engineering FAT Wrench. It's a handheld torque wrench that tells you how much twist you're using. It comes with 10 bits and can save you lots of grief. $60; 877-509-9160; battenfeldtechnologies.com

—DAVID E. PETZAL

RAISE A GLASS

Stonehedge Winery developed its Cool Fish label to be served with seafood. Anglers will be happy to know that a percentage of sales goes to the FishAmerica Foundation, which annually provides over $1 million to protect sport fisheries and habitat. Look for their selection of pinot grigio, sauvignon blanc, chardonnay, dry rosé, and red in selected Trader Joe's, Publix, Kroger, and other retailers. 707-256-4444; coolfish.org

—JAY CASSELL

ARCHER'S BLOCK

The best way to practice is the way you hunt—with a broadhead at the end of your arrow. The Block stops arrows by friction, making them easy to remove even with broadheads. The latest model, the Block 4x4, lets you shoot the target from four sides. But my original Block is still in such good shape despite years of pounding that I won't be upgrading for a while. $95-$150; 800-282-4868; fieldlogic.com

—ANTHONY LICATA

LOOK BUFFED

What's a Buff? A bandana, a facemask, a headband? It's all of the above, depending on how you wear it. Most important, the High UV Buff will literally help save your skin while you're fishing (or hunting). Made of elastic Coolmax fabric, it offers 95 percent protection from ultraviolet rays. And it's available in many catchy patterns. $21; 888-276-2833; buffusa.com

—KIRK DEETER

HOLD IT RIGHT THERE

When I first saw this hands-free rod holder, I thought, Would I actually use something like that? But this dual-hook system really is helpful in securing your rod to your vest, leaving both hands free to tie on a fly, unhook a fish, or perform countless other tasks. Inventor David Walko also points out how many physically challenged anglers buy his product. It's definitely worth a look. $10; 866-999-3303; fishhandsfree.com

—J.C.

XM RADIO MERGES WITH GPS

GPS technology shows no sign of slowing. This summer Bushnell is introducing the Onix 400, which uses XM satellite broadcasts to access live weather feeds, such as animated Doppler radar that you can overlay onto a map. The unit also accesses sports and entertainment programming on XM. With a 3½-inch color screen, it can store up to 1,000 waypoints, 20 trails, and 20 routes. $500; 800-423-3537; bushnellgps.com

—J.C.

SCREWDRIVER: WINE; BUFF: SPENCER JONES; BLOCK: TED MORRISON; MANNEQUIN ILLUSTRATION: WILL McDERMOTT